HEART DISEASE.

Some Facts Regarding the Rapid Increase of Heart Troubles.

Do Not Be Alarmed, But Look For the Cause.

Heart trouble, at least among Americans, is certainly increasing and while this may be largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more often the result of weak digestion, or poor diet.

At the origin of heart disease is an incurable but not a fatal disease, but one that is a hundred of heart trouble, is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because the organs are controlled by branches of the same great nerve, the sympathetic and vagus nerves.

Another way also the heart is affected by that form of poor digestion, which causes gas and fermentation from undigested food, there is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest.

Under the influence of the undigested food, the heart is forced to pump out more blood, and the blood is forced out of the heart.

CARPENTER-GOODEN W.

A Charming Wedding in the Unitarian Church

Followed by a Delightful Reception at Home of Bride's Brother.

The Unitarian church was the scene last evening at 8 o'clock of an exceedingly interesting wedding, the nuptials being celebrated in the presence of a company of relatives and friends of the couple most directly concerned which completely filled the edifice. It was a color wedding and the scheme of effect was perfectly carried out, giving rise to many words of admiration and delight on the part of those fortunate to be present. On this important occasion Mr. Eugene F. Carpenter, of Raleigh, N. C., was the groom and Miss N. Gooden, daughter of the late Judge and Mrs. H. C. Gooden, of Bangor, was the bride.

Artistic preparations had been made for the function and her friends had been invited to the wedding, which were all realized. The church was beautifully decorated by Florist Rector, transcribing the stately auditorium in a most charming manner for the purpose of wedding festivities. The chancel was hung with festoons of green and in each of the middle aisles were erected three arches of green, covered with chrysanthemums. In fact it was a chrysanthemum wedding, those handsome flowers predominating in the decorations of the church and at the bride's home.

At the pulpit a graceful arch of smiling, climbing asparagus and chrysanthemums was a bow under which the bride and groom stood. Other side of the pulpit were palms and other plants, overhanging trees and festoons of green, while at each window along the sides were garlands of green and flowers. The organ loft was festooned with the same and it may be said that the scheme of color and arrangement was well high perfect.

Long before the appointed hour the persons bidden commenced to arrive, in company having been erected from the street and carpet laid from the sidewalk to the church door.

Miss Shibley, the church organist, presided at the organ and played prelude to the wedding. The organist was Miss Shibley, the church organist, presided at the organ and played prelude to the wedding.

The bride and groom were met at the door by the bride's brother, Mr. Eugene F. Carpenter, of Raleigh, N. C., who was the groom and Miss N. Gooden, daughter of the late Judge and Mrs. H. C. Gooden, of Bangor, was the bride.

A TERRIFIC BLAZE.

An Early Morning Conflagration in

Dean's Livery, Stable, Perils, Store and Another Structure Threatened by the Fire.

About 2:30 this morning the ringing of whistles gave warning of a fire in that city and a bright light was seen about the ferryway, which later grew into a tremendous ball, lighting up brilliantly and making a magnificent spectacle. The light from this side of the river was a good one.

The blaze was in C. L. Dean's livery stable on Wilson street, near Main, and soon that building was wrapped in flames, the hay making a grand blaze. The horses were fortunately liberated, being turned loose just in time by the men who discovered the fire early. They ran around free for some time.

Mr. Dean lost all his carriages, hay and other contents of the stable, on which there was a partial insurance. Mr. Dean's livery stable was on the corner of Main street and was the corner of Main street and was the corner of Main street and was the corner of Main street.
